

POITÍN, POTCHEEN, POTEEN

Poitín – a term stemming from the Gaelic word ‘Pota’ which refers to the small copper pot still used by distillers today – is a long-established distilled Irish beverage traditionally brewed from cereals, molasses, sugar beet and/or potatoes.

Despite there being no official date recorded as to when it was first produced, Poitín has a long and infamous history – indeed, it was illegal all the way up to 1997 due to excise restrictions, and it packs quite a punch at 40%-90% ABV.
